New(ish)* Teacher Session #4

(March 13, 2012 @ 4:30-6:30 Room 213)

Much has been written about the role of parents in supporting and enhancing student success in school. Research shows that effective parental involvement at all grade levels can increase student achievement, improve attendance, reduce drop-out rates and increase community support for the school. This workshop will help teachers identify opportunities to work more effectively with parents to accomplish their mutual goal—success for all children. The workshop increases the awareness of the benefits of parental involvement by providing approaches for school staffs to communicate more effectively, reframing responses to challenging situations and involving parents in meaningful ways in the education process. All divisions are welcome to attend.

Dinner will be provided.
